CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Forty-First Congress-Second Regular Session

SATURDAY, FRESUARY 13, 1870. THE SERATE Was not in session to-day HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Mr. Judd, of Illinois, introduced a bill to elieve provision dealers governily from the payment of a manufacturer's tax imposed by the act of March 4, 1865. Referred to the Committee of Ways and Means.

Mr. Dixon, of Rhede Island, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a joint resolution to refund certain moneys paid by the whaling vessel Hamilton as hospital dues. Passed.

the winning research of the control of the flowes a day or two since.) Externed to the Committee on Revolutionary Fenders

On motico of Mr. Dawes, of Massachu-satis, the House resolved itself into the Com-mittee of the Whole and resumed the con-sideration of the legislative appropriation bill, the question being upon the motico of Mr. Davis, of New York, its strike out the paragraph appropriating $4,800 to the re-porters of the Sengressions Gode for the orters of the Congressional Globe for hird session of the Forty-first Congress dditional compensation. The amendment was rejected. Mr. Flokienburg, of Missouri, more stone the amendment of In amountment was rejection.

Mr. Ficklenburg, of Missouri, moved to reduce the appropriation for the public printing from $50,000 to $50,000. He said as the frankleg privilege was about to be abolished the necessity of so much printing was not necessary, and the appropriation could therefore be reduced.

Mr. Lafiln, of New Kork, hoped this would not be done, and demonstrated that the Govarament could not get along with leas, as a wast amount of printing was ordered by the departments.

Mr. Els, of New Hampshire, also opposed the amendment. He said the printing for Congress had decreased the last year, while that for the departments had largely increased.

Uniferess has decreased the last year, while that for the department had largely increased.

Mr. Builer, of Massachusetts, did not see why this House should attempt to regulate the amount of printing a head of department might want. We could do that by cutting of appropriations, but there would be no advantage in it. There was no consistency in trusting into Berestaries with the appenditure of millions of money for other purposes, and yet attempts to cut thom down in the matter of printing, and virtually saying we could not trust them to say how much printing they wasted done. It was simply another expression of want of confidence in the heads of departments, and in this opinion it was time that the fings at those officials should cease. He thought that this inherference with the department printing and department duties was all thought that the inherference with the department for the thought that the proposition Committee would have better performed it doty if it had given more considerable to the thought that the departments have what they were doing when they made their catimates.

After some further discussion Mr. Dawes, estimates.

After some further discussion Mr. Dawes, of Massachusetts, obtained the floor, and said he did not wish to pretong the desket, but he could not allow an opportunity to puss without noticing the lecture gives to the House and the committee by his colleague, [Mr. Batier,] whose conversion seemed to be as sudden as that of him who journeyed to Damasseus.

The representatives of the people are held responsible for the appropriation of the people's money. The responsibility of scruding carefully where every dollar has for him he felt it his duty to diligent it those who pleased might get rid of) but as for him he felt it his duty to diligent have the confidence of the House and of the country he would continue to pursue this toor. In a their proper sphere the Departments had a duty to perform, and he the did unt question that they did it well. But he also had a duty to perform, and he well did not question that they did it well. But he also had a duty to perform, and he well did not question that they did it well. But he also had a duty to perform, and he will be did not question that they did it well. But he also had a duty to perform, and he will be the subject.

Mr. Butler, of Mass., said he had no dastre not be diverted from in my man, the subject.

Mr. Butler, of Mass., sald he had no desire to lecture the House or any member thereof, but he was dealing with the estimates of the public Departments. He had nothing more to say on that subject now, but he more to say on that subject now, but he was the multi-more had be until more. more to say on that subject now, but his wanted to save the public money in the matter of printing by once and for all pulling a bar between the comparison that was continually drawn between Raul of Tarsus and himself. He had heard that comparison just injection and a half times. He saw no reason why the expense of putting it in type should be incurred every time, and he would suggest that it he kept standing, so that all might read it. There were three standing so consections that also might be kept that all night read it. There were three standing accumations that also night be kept in type, and they were—lat, that he would for Jeff. Davis; All, that his conversion to Republicanism was a sudden does, and Sa, that he was not in the Republican party along as some other people. That was all true. But his the olden time he had no doubt there were many who would stand by Judas, only because he was the oldest apostate. [Laughter]

The amendment was further discussed by different gentlemen.

The amendment was further discussed by different gentlemen.

The amendment was not agreed to.

In the progress of the debate upon the paragraph, and the one following, Mr. Min, of New Hampshirs, charged that the great augumnt necessary to be appropriated was is consequence of mismissagement at the Government Printing Office. He said that the number of pages of printed matter issued at that office last year was much less than precoding years, and yet the expense was much greater.

The bill was then further read without at that office last year was much see than precoding years, and yet the expense was much greater. The bill was then further read without semendment until the paragraph was reached for purchasing books for the Library, when Ms. Wood moved to make the appropriation $7,000 instead of $6,000. He make this 87,000 instead of $3,000. He made this attendment only to say that he thought fibere was an abuse in the fact that all sorter of pamphies were placed in the Library. He thought shootymous pamphies of an abusive natures ought to be encluded. Mosers. Haldennan, Banks, and others both contended that it was the duty of the Librarian to put in all works published. It was agreed on all sides that Mr. Spofford, the Librarian, was a most excellent officer, and that a better man could not be found to lijt the position. He had fallifally attended to his duties, and if there was any fault it was in the law and not with the Librarian, but it was conceded that no expeption should be made in playing books and pamphies in the Library.
